Recruiting Good Salespeople

You'd be surprised at how many stations are out there with no salespeople. I suppose the owners expect business to walk in the door by itself. Not surprisingly these stations don't bring in much revenue and then we get the call to help them sell the station.

But even among stations which manage a professional sales staff we hear how hard it is to recruit and hold onto good salespeople. We've invited sales consultant Jim Taszarek as our expert guest (below) to offer some suggestions as to where to look for good, committed salespeople who can help you with top line revenue.

We encourage you to send your sales staff to sales training seminars offered by your state broadcasters association as well as the materials and other resources offered by the Radio Advertising Bureau. Having the professional sales staff in your market will pay big dividends to you for years to come.

Radio is a business after all and maintaining and motivating a good sales staff is critical for profitability each year and for building the value of your stations when it becomes time to sell them.

I hope Taz's suggestions are helpful to you. Please let me know what you think! The conversation continues at our Facebook page and Twitter feed. Please "Like" us!

Station Appraisals

Think of CMS Station Brokerage when you need a station appraisal. Lenders, station owners, broadcast attorneys and government officials have come to CMS Station Brokerage to appraise the value of station properties. Some of the typical uses for a station appraisal include:

- Financing and recapitalization
- Mergers, acquisitions and spin-offs
- Sale or purchase of the business

What Crystal Award Winners Are Doing In Their Communities

We like to share with you ideas from stations which are truly Full Service. Take some of these and run with them! It's good for the community and it will benefit your bottom line! Here is one of the Crystal Award winners from 2011.

WRVW-FM Nashville, TN

As Nashville's heritage Top 40 station, 107.5 The River has been enriching the lives of listeners in the Nashville area for over 15 years. The true power of the radio station is not in the fun we have, the number of songs we play or the prizes we award; it's in the ways we're able to live back to our community and affect people's lives in a positive way.

In 2010, 107.5 The River listeners helped raise over $500,000 for multiple charities in the Middle Tennessee area.

In May of 2010, Middle Tennessee suffered devastating damage due to flooding. Clear Channel Radio Nashville suspended all regular programming for one day to address the immediate needs of our listeners.

We also partner yearly with Children's Miracle Network for "The River Hope Radiothon" supporting the Monroe Carell Jr. Children's Hospital. The funds raised stay in Middle Tennessee to support research for children. 107.5 The River donated and additional $400,00 in airtime and 750 staff hours to causes and organizations in the community. Furthermore, 107.5 The River aired 239 public service announcements, 89 hours of no-charge broadcasting, 52 hours of public affairs programming, 18,383 promotional announcements and 993 hours of news and weather.

I Can't Find Good Sales Candidates

Allow me to share with you that there's a rich and untapped abundance of great potential salespeople right in front of us—a group we usually disregard.

Just finished the book The Big Shift by Marc Freedman. It was written to show that the nation has an entire generation in flux, the 60+ crowd. In the U.S., 10,000 people turn 65 every day. They are the largest and richest portion of the population. The book proposes that this is a competitive economic advantage for our country. His words...

"If we act, the 'encore years' could well become a fulfilling destination - and the individuals flooding into it have the human capital solution to much that ails us in society. As we confront significant challenges in areas like education, the environment and health care, this windfall of talent could help carry us toward a new generation of solutions."

The Old-Fart or Geezer Factor

In past decades, those 65+ were automatically classified as "elderly" or "retiree" or "pensioner," automatically written off as having no value in the workforce. ("They don't even have a Facebook page.") They were a throwaway segment. However, in today's economy we're recycling everything and finding new uses for old products. So...

Let's re-think our situation as of 2012. Radio needs professional, committed salespeople, right? Here's my experience with most businesspeople in that age group. (Most, not all; see below.) In my experience, Boomers:

- While many in the 70+ group haven't hooked on to Social Media yet, they are the undisputed master of the face-to-face call. Personal 1:1 relationships are their asset.
- Aren't intimidated by titles such as CEO, COO or President and, therefore, cold calling on Vito is nothing to them.
- They understood better how business works (balance sheet, P&L, overhead), an advantage both internally and when talking to a client.
- Have decades of business of experience and business knowledge-resulting in intuitive skills enabling them to pull ideas out of nowhere.
- Because of that experience, they're more likely to also work smarter.
- Are extremely loyal to their employers-they want to see their younger managers and everyone around them succeed. (They're grandparents)
- Need less direction and attention than their younger counterparts.
- Usually have other sources of income like Social Security, IRAs or pensions and, while not motivated any less by money, don't need a big guarantee.
- Most have Medicare or health insurance so you needn't provide benefits.
- You can hire them as an independent contractor.
- Love victories.

Not all Boomers are equal.

Of course, most of us have the old-timer stereotype in mind. It's a veteran sitting on a list and intractable to new ideas, especially digital. "You can't teach an old dog new tricks," said one. But that's not the universal case. There are eons of Boomer workers with Facebook friends and Twitter followers. Conversely I've met people in their 30s fitting the same description.

Here are some tips:

- When you interview them, ask if they have a Smartphone, iPad or a Facebook account. It's not the most important question, but telling.

- Ask them about their past success. That'll give you an idea of accounts and categories where they'll be successful. They seem to do extremely well in categories like financial, banking, legal, insurance.
- Ask them who they KNOW in the market. Clients, leaders etc.
- A retired auto dealer, GM or sales manager could be a goldmine. A retired, successful ad agency exec could be a platinum mine. Likewise grocery or Big Box retail. They understand those businesses-we don't.

Another group VP told me that they usually hire older people to turn over rocks. Nay, nay. Don't let them create their own lists and wander around cold-calling. Rather, sit with them and create a list of targets that need work at the client level. Like all other salespeople, they're most accountable when they have a monthly quota.

March marks the 30th anniversary of the date when I took the plunge and started my own business. In that time we have come to know changes - some challenging, some wonderful - and have gotten to know many hundreds of great broadcasters and friends. I value all of you and look forward to the next 30 years of growing together.

We will be attending the NAB Convention in Las Vegas in April. If you would like to get together for a private meeting, or simply to have a drink give me a call and we'll get together.

Roger

Closing Quote

"Recruiting is the lifeblood of any program, so you can't put anything above that,...But it wouldn't matter who you had here if you didn't have the right mental attitude and work ethic. You need all those elements to come together to do something like we are doing."
